Mark on the Library

M: I would generally begin my search in a …just general search engine. Unless I know some specific text that I want…I find that it can…sometimes when you're trying to search library databases…like you said had mentioned before…it can be kind of difficult to find what you want unless you know what you're looking for. I've seen that myself. I do…I will, sometimes, depending on my mood, jump into the USF database and just punch in a few authors, if I know that there are a couple of authors that might be related to something …like for example when I was researching my thesis…

J: …right…

M: …researching philosophy…
