

What do you do with your smartphone?

I mostly use my phone to communicate with my friends or other people, like collaborating on group projects or something.

I check email, I check the time, all the time. I take photos, I keep my files here – I use the Dropbox app.

I play games on it, I text on it, I have all kinds of apps that teach me things and make me smarter, like word of the day app, and crossword app, and poetry daily app.

I call my family, I text – mostly – I actually pay for minutes, so I text a lot.

Lots of text messaging, occasional phone calling, umm... I spend a lot of time looking up recipes.

I Instagram, I text with my mom and my sister, I mean, it's just... maps. It tells me where to go.

Social networks, Facebook, LinkedIn, uh... check up on email, umm... just a lot of different things.

Searching Reddit, Google Reader, umm... playing just a few games like Sudoku.

I... have Twitter on my phone, which I really love. I use my Twitter mostly as a newsfeed.

Texts and calls, of course, and I check Facebook and Twitter.

I use it for texting and calling, but then also for browsing the Internet, and it's also kinda like my iPod now. I have all my music on there.

I have a couple of apps, not very many. Probably should have more to be hip.

I not only use it for, you know, just browsing the Web, but I also use it for, you know, communicating with people.
